Our data indicates that

nearly half of the 500,000

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan member visits to the ER in 2015

were potentially avoidable.¹

The average cost per non-emergency ER visit is $750,

compared to less than $200

at other high-quality choices for care.²

Overuse of the emergency room for situations that are not life-threatening has an enormous impact on the overall cost and efficiency of health care, which burdens everyone. In contrast, when people choose where to get care properly, they not only get the treatment they need, but they also reduce costs across the system and help ensure that time, skills and resources are used efficiently.

Who is most likely to use the ER when it isn’t an emergency?

According to our data¹:

- Members without a primary care physician
- Women ages 20 to 35
- Members transitioning between life stages, such as recent graduates or those changing careers

Our members have expressed a willingness to use options besides the ER, but currently they have limited understanding of the scope of services offered by their other choices for care.

When employees understand what is and isn’t a true emergency and choose a smart place to get care for their conditions, it can help them become more knowledgeable and efficient health care consumers.

The average cost of a non-emergency ER visit is $750 and about 250,000 ER visits were potentially avoidable in 2015. Reducing those 250,000 ER visits could have resulted in savings of $187.5 million.

Preventing avoidable ER visits benefits both your employees and your company.
Blue Cross offers your employees a wide variety of high-quality health care choices for non-emergency illnesses and injuries.

In this marketing planner, we share our best practices for teaching your employees about these smart health care options for when it isn’t a true emergency.

- Primary care doctor: Comprehensive, personalized, long-term care provided by a doctor you know and trust.
- 24-Hour Nurse Line: Free medical advice from a registered nurse from the comfort of your home or on the go — anytime day or night.
- Blue Cross Online Visits™: Video-chat visits or phone calls with U.S. board-certified doctors or behavioral health professionals, anywhere in the U.S.
- Retail health clinics: Walk-in medical care and prescriptions, if needed, at select drug store chains with extended hours.
- Urgent care centers: Convenient in-person care for a wide range of non-emergency situations, even late and on weekends.
- Emergency room: Emergency medical care for life-threatening situations.
We want to help you successfully engage with your employees and educate them about their choices for non-emergency health care.

To do that, this planner is:

- Equipped with a comprehensive, customizable strategy for a health care choices campaign
- Loaded with the communications materials you’ll need — from start to finish
- Designed to give you control over when and what choices for care you promote to your employees

In the last section of this planner, you’ll find a full suite of creative collateral to support your employee education efforts from beginning to end. There are various digital and print formats, and everything is tailored to the care choices relevant to your employees.

Additionally, your employees may see communications from Blue Cross by email, direct mail and social media, or on bcbsm.com, about these topics, which could complement your efforts.
Our communications approach includes two phases:

Phase one: Awareness

Building awareness at the start of a campaign gets people ready to hear and absorb more detailed messages on a particular topic. It sets the stage by introducing the key concepts that will be revisited, which makes a campaign more effective as a whole.

During this phase, your employees will learn at a high level about all the choices for minor medical care that they have access to.

Phase two: Education

Once you’ve established a basic level of awareness, you’ll begin to educate your employees in detail about each choice for care available to them, and when and how to use it.

Think of this phase as a series of focused mini campaigns — one for each minor medical care option your employees can use. It will help boost learning and create lasting behavior change when combined with efforts to sustain awareness.
This high-level timeline shows how awareness and education might work together over the course of this campaign.

The examples in this planner assume companies offer their employees access to all five choices for care. For these companies, we recommend a full, 18-month campaign. Your company may be different. We’ll give you a worksheet version of this framework that you can tailor to your needs in the Building your plan section.

Blue Cross

Communications may include email, direct mail and social media, or content on bcbsm.com about these topics, which could complement your efforts.

Awareness and education creative materials include print and digital communications such as flyers, posters, postcards, web banners, social media and email.
Here’s how various types of awareness communications might work together over the course of this campaign to reach your employees. We’ll give you a worksheet version of this sample plan in the Building your plan section.

Initial rollout

Use this time to build awareness among your employees about all their choices for care.

Month 1
- Put up posters and digital signs in high-traffic areas
- Hand out flyers at staff events

Month 2
- Publish web banners and an article to the intranet site
- Send a direct mail to employees’ homes

Month 3
- Publish a newsletter article
- Send an email

Months 4–18
- Refresh communications quarterly, including changing posters and digital signage
- Post on social media

Sustain

During this time, you’ll begin your education efforts. However, sustaining awareness is still important.
This is how one mini education campaign, focused on a particular choice for care, might be rolled out. You’ll launch these mini campaigns one at a time and may choose to mimic this example for each of your company’s other choices for care. We’ll give you a worksheet version of this sample plan in the Building your plan section.

Month 1
- Put up posters and digital signs in high-traffic areas
- Hand out flyers at staff events

Month 2
- Publish web banners and an article to the intranet site
- Send a direct mail to employees’ homes

Month 3
- Publish a newsletter article
- Send an email
- Post on social media

Not sure how to get started yet? Next, we’ll take a closer look at the three key elements of an effective communications strategy. Understanding these high-level principles will help you fill in the details.
An effective communications strategy has:

- Consistent messaging

  Besides communicating in multiple ways and repeating your message over time, an effective communications strategy needs consistent messaging woven throughout. Although phrased in various ways, the message we consistently incorporated in the communications included in this planner is:

  “When your employees need minor medical care, they have choices that are smarter and more convenient than the ER. There’s a place to get care for whatever condition they have.”

  To complement this messaging, we included a mix of engaging, people-focused imagery that’s reflective of a diverse workforce.

- Repetition over time

  The frequency and volume of your communications might change during the different parts of your campaign. For example, during the awareness phase, we recommend you distribute more communications during initial rollout than when you’re sustaining awareness.

  The quantity of each type of communication you’ll use depends largely on your workplace and employees.

- Multiple types of communications

  There are many ways to communicate effectively with your employees, including email, posters, digital signs or your company’s intranet site. This planner includes unique communications for each of these.

This marketing planner integrates these elements to create lasting impressions that can help change your employees’ behavior.
Building your plan | Communicate in multiple ways

To identify which types of communications will work best at your company, start by asking yourself:

- What types of communications do I already use? Options might include posters, flyers, direct mail, digital signs, social media, web banners, email, newsletters and intranet copy.
- Which types of communications have been effective at reaching my employees in the past?
- Are my employees hourly or salaried?
- What does a typical day look like for my employees? Do they use computers often or work in a factory setting?
- What spaces around the office are used often? Maybe it’s certain entrances, elevators, escalators, conference rooms, hallways, break rooms, coffee shops, cafeterias or other common areas.
- Are there regular team or departmental meetings? When and where are they?
- How do I or my colleagues prefer to be communicated with?

You know your company best. Customize this plan to what works for you.
We’ve covered the high-level strategy and how to begin planning this campaign. Now it’s time to take a look at all of the communication materials available to you. Roll over each one of the options below to preview them. You’ll be able to choose your version of these materials next.

Awareness
- Posters
- Wallet card
- Flyer
- Postcard
- Digital sign
- Social media
- Web banner
- Email
- Newsletter

Education
- Flyer
- Postcard
- Digital sign
- Social media
- Web banner
- Email
The version of the materials you need is determined by the choices for care that your company offers its employees. Review each combination of care choices below and choose the version that fits your company.

There are four versions. You’ll only choose one. Once you’ve determined which version you need, click it to choose your materials.
