What you should know about medication safety, storage and disposal

Everyone can help prevent opioid misuse, abuse and addiction. To help keep your homes and communities safe, it’s important to understand how to safely take, store and dispose of medication.

Take medications safely

Here are some key factors to think about when it comes to your prescriptions. Taking these steps decreases your risk of harmful drug interactions.

- Talk to your doctor and pharmacist about the medications you take. Read the label on your prescription and take it exactly as prescribed.
- Always tell your doctors what medications you’re taking and how much.
- Let your doctor know what over-the-counter medications you’re taking, too. This includes vitamins and supplements.
- Use the same pharmacy for all your prescriptions.

Store medications correctly

Keep your family safe by correctly storing your medications. Here’s how:

• Keep medications away from children and pets.
• Teach children that they should always have an adult present when taking medicine; it’s not candy.
• Store your medication separate from that of others to avoid the risk of taking the wrong prescription.
• After taking medication, make sure the cap is locked tight; put it away immediately.
• Keep purses and bags containing medications in out-of-reach or locked areas, such as closets or drawers.

Dispose of old medications

Forgotten medications will expire, which means that they become ineffective or toxic. Unfortunately, unused medications can end up with the wrong person. That’s why it’s important to properly dispose of them.

The easiest way to dispose of your expired or unused prescription is participate in National Prescription Drug Take Back Day. Go to takebackday.dea.gov to find drop-off locations and dates.

Another option is to take them to year-round take-back facilities. Find a local opioid drop-off location near you by using the online search tool at the DEA website.

If you can’t get to a take-back location, follow these steps to safely dispose of your medications:

• Remove medicine from prescription containers and remove or scratch out any personal information on the labels.
• Mix the medicine with cat litter, saw dust, coffee grounds or another absorbent substance. Avoid crushing pills or capsules.
• Place the mixture in a sealable bag and throw it away.

Make drug safety your top priority to ensure a safe environment for your home and community.
